Development, Evaluation, and Deployment of Forward Crash Avoidance Systems (FOCAS) Zevi Bareket,P.

Fancher,1998 This work is part of a multiyear program to foster the development evaluation and deployment of forward crash avoidance systems The work performed during the first two years of this program addressed adaptive cruise control and warnings based upon the motion and proximity of preceding vehicles in the path of travel The research work done in the first and second years has provided a foundation for the work performed in this third year The technology related work for the third year was focused upon the addition of braking to an UMRI prototype of an ACC system The objective of this work is to provide test results and system development experience showing the engineering and human factors issues posed by braking as a supplement to ACC or within a medium deceleration crash avoidance function The results indicated that the acceleration level used in increasing the speed of the ACC vehicle was not satisfactory in the opinion of most of the test drivers Drivers did not want to slow down too much because they were concerned with how long it would take to get back up to the desired speed and headway time gap They indicated that the resume rate of the system was the system s weakness With regard to the buzzer that was used to warn the driver when the system was asking for the maximum deceleration authority there were some drivers who did not like buzzers in general and some drivers who thought the features of this buzzer could be improved The ratings concerning the deceleration level the following control and the system s smoothness were quite good It is recommended that a simple rule for modulating the throttle should be used to achieve the basic ACC functionality Braking should be applied in a progressively increasing manner and it should be used to adjust vehicle deceleration in a way that will lead to headway time and distance gaps such that throttle modulation can control headway Every effort should be made to improve the forward acceleration capability of the vehicle when it is under ACC control The warning system should have a nonaggressive signal to inform the driver when braking at the full deceleration authority of the ACC system has been reached Further consideration should be given to adding another more aggressive signal to warn the driver when the deceleration needed to barely avoid a crash exceeds the control authority of the ACC system Romance

Colmer,2006-02-03 In the last decade enormous progress has been made on the physiology of plant roots including on a wide range of molecular aspects Much of that progress has been captured in the chapters of this book Breakthroughs have been made possible through integration of molecular and whole plant aspects The classical boundaries between physiology biochemistry and molecular biology have vanished There has been a strong focus on a limited number of model species including Arabidopsis thaliana That focus has allowed greater insight into the significance of specific genes for plant development and functioning However many species are very different from A thaliana in that they are mycorrhizal develop a symbiosis with N₂ fixing microsymbionts or have other specialised root structures Also some have a much greater capacity to resist extreme environments such as soil acidity salinity flooding or heavy metal toxicities due to specific adaptations Research on species other than A thaliana is therefore pivotal to develop new knowledge in plant sciences in a comprehensive manner This fundamental new knowledge can be the basis for important applications in e g agriculture and plant conservation Although significant progress has been made much remains to be learnt It is envisaged that discoveries made in the recent past will likely lead to major breakthroughs in the next decade Oversight of Clean Air Act Implementation United States.
