

Study Guide: Physical and Chemical Oceanography

Effective composition of seawater is determined by:

- 1) Primary salinity - given amount of dissolved solids with respect to total weight, freshwater composition is 96.5% composition
- 2) Source - water coming through salt balance from atmosphere, rivers, rain, and ice melting contributes, resulting in different salinities, but all derived from same
- 3) Secondary salinities gained - through chemical composition, biologically, or from evaporation and freezing, which results in more solid for lower amount of water

Effective salinity and composition on salinity:

- 1) Equivalent - same composition, same weight
- 2) Equivalent weight - equivalent to weight of same amount of water

How temperature and salinity produce density, water volume, and pressure:

Temperature differences cause water layers:

- 1) warm water rises above cold water, cold water is more dense
- 2) warm, less dense water is floating on a colder, denser water below
- 3) when the temperature difference persists, the water becomes isotherms, so as the difference

Salinity differences cause water layers:

- 1) water with higher salinity is denser than water with lower salinity
- 2) water with higher salinity, and lower density, floats above water with higher salinity
- 3) density (mass) increases as salinity increases, but density decreases as temperature increases
- 4) the higher the salinity, the more dense the water is, so the more dense the water is, the more dense the water is
