Racially Aggravated Common Assault Sentencing Guidelines:

Sentencing Guidelines Andrew Ashworth, Julian V. Roberts, 2013-07-18 The politics of criminal sentencing has recently crystallised around the issue of whether and how a system of structured sentencing should inform judicial approaches to punishing criminals Increasingly structured sentencing guidelines are being introduced to frame judicial discretion This volume is the first to examine the experience in England and Wales in the light of international developments This collection of essays begins with a clear and concise history of the guidelines as well as a description of how they function Topics addressed include the effect of guidelines on judicial practice the role of public opinion in developing sentencing guidelines the role of the crime victim in sentencing guidelines and the use of guidelines by practicing barristers In addition the international dimension offers a comparative perspective the English guidelines are explored by leading academics from the United States and New Zealand Although there is a vast literature on sentencing guidelines across the United States the English guidelines have attracted almost no attention from scholars As other jurisdictions look to introduce more structure to sentencing the English scheme offers a real alternative to current US schemes Contributors include practicing lawyers legal and socio legal academics and also scholars from several other countries including New Zealand and the United States providing a multidisciplinary and cross jurisdictional approach to sentencing This book will be of interest to academics from law sociology and criminology legal practitioners and indeed anyone else with an interest in sentencing around the world justice in summary criminal proceedings by considering the ability of defendants to play an active and effective role in the process Access to justice refers not just to the availability of legally aided representation but also to the ability of defendants to understand and effectively participate in summary criminal proceedings more generally It remains a vital principle of justice that justice should not only be done but should also be seen to be done by all participants in the process The book is based on socio legal research The study is ethnographic based on observation conducted in four magistrates courts in South East England and interviews with both defence lawyers and Crown prosecutors Setting out an argument that defendants have always been marginalised through particular features of magistrates court proceedings such as courtroom layout and patterns of behaviour among the professional workgroups in court the political climate in relation to defendants and access to justice that has persisted since 2010 has further undermined the ability of defendants to play an active role in the process Ultimately this book argues that recent governments have demanded ever more efficiency and cost saving in criminal justice In that context principles that contribute to access to justice for defendants have been seriously undermined
