In 1903 Svante Arrhenius won the Nobel Prize in Chemistry for defining acids and bases in terms of the ions produced. An Arrhenius acid is any substance that produces hydrogen ions [or hydronium ions (H_3O^+) a hydrogen ion attached to a water molecule] when dissolved in water. An Arrhenius base is any substance that produces hydroxide ions when dissolved in water. While the Arrhenius definitions of acids and bases is useful, it is limited. Johannes Brønsted and Thomas Lowry developed more general definitions for acids and bases using H^+ ion (proton) transfer as the focus.

7. Identify the Brønsted-Lowry acids in Model 2.

a. Atoms of which element are present in all of the Brønsted-Lowry acids in Model 2?

H

b. How can you tell from Reaction 1 that HCl loses an H^+ ion rather than a hydrogen atom when the reaction occurs? Hint: Look at the products.

8. For each acid-base reaction in Model 2, describe the role of the Brønsted-Lowry acid in the H^+ ion (proton) transfer that occurs.

9. For each acid-base reaction in Model 2, describe the role of the Brønsted-Lowry base in the proton (H^+ ion) transfer that occurs.

pKa Prediction for Organic Acids and Bases D. Perrin, 2012-11-27 Many chemists and biochemists require to know the ionization constants of organic acids and bases This is evident from the Science Citation Index which lists The Determination of Ionization Constants by A Albert and E P Serjeant 1971 as one of the most widely quoted books in the chemical literature Although ultimately there is no satisfactory alternative to experimental measurement it is not always convenient or practicable to make the necessary measurements and calculations Moreover the massive pK compilations currently available provide values for only a small fraction of known or possible acids or bases For example the compilations listed in Section 1.3 give pK data for some 6 000 8 000 acids whereas if the conservative estimate is made that there are one hundred different substituent groups available to substitute in the benzene ring of benzoic acid approximately five million tri substituted benzoic acids are theoretically possible Thus we have long felt that it is useful to consider methods by which a pK value might be predicted as an interim value to within several tenths of a pH unit using arguments based on linear free energy relationships by analogy by extrapolation by interpolation from existing data or in some other way This degree of precision may be adequate for many purposes such as the recording of spectra of pure species as anion neutral molecule or cation for selection of conditions favourable to solvent extraction and for the interpretation of pH profiles for organic reactions
