READ THIS!

Feedback loops include the following three components: stimulus, signal, and a response. A stimulus is something that triggers or increases an event. The signal is a method of communicating information between two things. Finally, the response is the reaction to the stimulus.

Below are several descriptions of processes that occur in the human body. For each example, identify the stimulus and the response and state whether the process is positive or negative feedback.

5. When human tissue, such as skin or a blood vessel, is torn or cut, the cells near the damage send out a signal that activates platelets in the vicinity. As the platelets begin to form a plug, they release more chemical signals to attract more platelets and other clotting factors until the bleeding is stopped.

stimulus: The signal that activates platelets in the vicinity response: The bleeding stops positive feedback
