Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during exercise compared to the control group. The decrease in HR and HRR was greater in the exercise group than in the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output. This is because the higher price makes it more profitable to produce. The producer will continue to increase output until the marginal cost of production equals the price of the output.
