Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 10 years. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR at rest decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the HRR at rest decreased from 28 to 24 beats per minute. The HR during exercise increased from 150 to 160 beats per minute, and the HRR during exercise increased from 78 to 92 beats per minute. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial or nonnatural light sources. To avoid this, there are laws that prohibit the use of such light in the home or office.
- Artificial sources of light will commonly interfere with the body's natural circadian rhythms, the length of the day and night being determined by the sun and moon's positions.
- The end of the day is the best time to sleep. It may change the phase of the circadian rhythm, but it is not a problem. It is better to sleep early. Sleep is not a problem for those people who are nocturnal. Sleep is a problem for those who are diurnal.
