

Digestion in the Stomach

The stomach is C-shaped organ lying in the upper left quadrant of the abdomen. The stomach is a major site of digestion. Physical digestion is accomplished by muscular movements of the stomach wall, which squeeze and churn food into smaller pieces. Chemical digestion is accomplished by mixing food with liquids in the stomach. Within the mucous layer of the stomach are millions of pits that end in tubular gastric glands. These glands produce gastric juice, a complex fluid that contains a variety of substances. There are 4 types of secretory cells in each gastric gland, each of which release their own digestive product.

Secretory Cell	Product	Description
Mucous cells	Mucus	Viscous liquid, protects stomach lining from self-digestion by acid
Parietal cells	Hydrochloric acid	Acid, breaks down numerous foods; activates pepsin; kills pathogens
Chief cells	Pepsinogen	Precursor molecule; converted to pepsin by acid; breaks down proteins
	Lipase	Digestive enzyme; breaks down fats into fatty acids and glycerol
G cells	Gastrin	Regulatory hormone; stimulates gastric glands after ingesting food

The stomach is also the site of initial absorption of nutrients. These include small amounts of water, glucose, and ions. After spending roughly 0.5 - 4 hours in the stomach, food had been turned into a pulpy liquid called chyme, which passes into the small intestine for further processing.

Digestion in the Small Intestine

The small intestine is the longest section of the gastrointestinal tract, averaging 5 - 6 m (17 - 20 ft) in length. It is divided into 3 main sections. The duodenum is the short upper section, measuring 0.25 m (10 in.) long and is where most chemical digestion of food occurs. The jejunum is the middle section, measuring 2.5 m (8 ft) long and is where most absorption takes place. Finally, the ileum is the longest lower section, measuring 3.7 m (12 ft) in length and is where the absorption of important vitamins, such as A, B₁₂, D, E, and K occurs.

The duodenum receives chyme and gastric juice from the stomach through a ring of smooth muscle called the pyloric sphincter. Chemical digestion in the duodenum is achieved by a variety of substances released by the liver, pancreas, and the duodenum itself.

Firstly, tubular glands in the mucous layer of the duodenum, known as intestinal glands or crypts of Lieberkuhn, secrete intestinal juice, a watery fluid composed of hormones, alkaline mucus, and digestive enzymes. The alkaline mucus helps neutralize the hydrochloric acid from the stomach. There are numerous digestive enzymes that break down large food molecules into smaller nutrients. Proteases, such as peptidases, trypsinases, and aminopeptidases complete protein digestion and release free amino acids. Carbohydrases, including lactase, sucrase, and maltase break down their complementary disaccharides (lactose, sucrose, maltose) into monosaccharides. Finally, nucleases break down large RNA and DNA molecules into smaller nucleotides.

Secondly, the pancreas, a leaf-shaped accessory organ located just behind the stomach, contributes pancreatic juice, a colorless, alkaline fluid which enters the duodenum through the pancreatic duct. Pancreatic juice contains a number of digestive enzymes which break down proteins, fats, and starches. Pancreatic proteases such as trypsin, chymotrypsin, and carboxypeptidase break down proteins into amino acids. Pancreatic lipase breaks down fats into fatty acids and glycerol. Pancreatic amylase breaks down starch into the disaccharide maltose. In addition, pancreatic juice contains a large amount of
