RESEARCH The authors used a 10-item questionnaire to assess the prevalence of the following symptoms: fatigue, difficulty concentrating, difficulty sleeping, difficulty remembering, difficulty completing tasks, difficulty making decisions, difficulty interacting with others, difficulty managing time, difficulty managing stress, and difficulty managing emotions. The questionnaire was administered to 100 participants, and the results showed that 75% of participants reported at least one symptom, with fatigue being the most common symptom reported by 60% of participants.

CONCLUSIONS The study found that a significant proportion of participants reported symptoms of burnout, with fatigue being the most common symptom. The authors suggest that further research is needed to explore the underlying causes of burnout and to develop effective interventions to prevent and manage burnout.
