

Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for low back pain between two groups of nurses working in different departments. The study included 100 nurses from two departments: one department had a higher prevalence of low back pain than the other. The results showed that the prevalence of low back pain was significantly higher in the first department compared to the second department. The risk factors for low back pain were also significantly different between the two departments.
