- Two-Stage Least Squares uses exogenous variables to help solve the problem of endogeneity by using a two-stage process. In the first stage, the endogenous variable is regressed on the exogenous variables to create predicted values. In the second stage, the original dependent variable is regressed on these predicted values.
- Three-Stage Least Squares extends Two-Stage Least Squares to systems of equations. It allows for simultaneous equations models where multiple endogenous variables are determined simultaneously.
- Generalized Method of Moments (GMM) is a flexible framework for estimating parameters of models where the error terms are correlated. It uses moment conditions to derive estimates.
- Instrumental Variables (IV) is a general approach to addressing endogeneity. It involves finding variables that are correlated with the endogenous variable but uncorrelated with the error term.
- Two-Stage Least Squares is a specific case of IV regression where the instruments are used to create predicted values of the endogenous variable.
