

Executive summary

This Safety Report, the first ever comprehensive publication of its kind to be issued by a company, shares details on Uber's safety progress, processes, and commitment to reports of the most critical safety incidents on our platform. It represents the latest in a series of actions Uber has taken to continually improve the safety of our platform for all who use it.

We know most companies would not share publicly much of the information we have included here. But even though the decision to do so was hard, we have chosen to publish this report because we believe that the long-term benefits far exceed the risks. We know that transparency is essential to trust, particularly by those relating to sexual violence. And, simply put, we don't believe corporate secrecy will make anyone safer.

People have a right to know about the safety records of the companies and organizations they rely on every day. And we believe that publishing this data will help us drive the kind of platform that will prevent serious safety incidents from occurring in the first place.

The issues in this report are bigger than Uber and impact every corner of society as a whole. The data itself may challenge your assumptions. For example, while media coverage of one issue of sexual assault related to Uber has shown mostly portrayed drivers as the alleged offenders, our data shows that drivers report assaults at roughly the same rate as riders across the 5 most serious categories of sexual assault. Drivers have victims, too.

This report includes information about Uber's safety investments and the actions we take as a result of safety-related reports from users. But the primary focus is the other data about reports of serious safety incidents—and the insights that help us track our progress, set more ambitious, and driving them safely on our platform across the industry.

It is important to understand the scale of Uber's business in interpreting this data. This year, nearly 400 million trips happened every day in the US—more than 40 rides every second. At such a large scale, Uber's platform-agnostic method, the world's most comprehensive—both in scope and in scale, in the numbers in this report will show, critical safety incidents on our platform, at critical safety, ultimately, but even more critical safety incidents in our safety-related reports represent the broad spectrum of incidents on the Uber ecosystem.

For the purposes of this report, we examine data from 2017 and 2018—a time frame in which an average of more than 3.2 million trips happened every day in the US. The vast majority (99.9%) of all Uber trips end without any safety-related issue at all this year, for the trips in 2017 and 2018.

- 1.8% of trips had a support request for a report of a safety issue, most frequently for issues such as lost items, refunds, or rider feedback.
- 0.2% of trips had a support request for a safety-related concern, and the majority of these concerns were a lost item—rather safety issues such as complaints of harassment or a critical incident.
- 0.0003% of trips had a report of a critical safety incident, which are the incidents referenced in this report.

The vast majority of the reports that Uber receives are not safety-related at all. All potential safety-related reports are carefully reviewed based on pre-established criteria for proper categorization. When our support team receives safety-related reports, they are flagged and classified by agents based on the classification governing the reporting party, and appropriate action is then taken as a result and every case.

We don't believe corporate secrecy will make anyone safer.
