Answer the following questions:

- 1.1 Describe the hydrologic cycle, components, and processes. The hydrologic cycle is a continuous process that moves water around the planet. It is driven by the sun's energy, which causes water to evaporate from the surface of the ocean and land. The water vapor then condenses into clouds, which eventually release the water as precipitation. The water then flows back to the ocean or infiltrates the ground, where it can be stored for a long time before being released back into the cycle.
- 1.2 Define erosion, and the following erosion parts: runoff, channels, meanders, oxbow lakes, and floodplains. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. Runoff is the water that flows over the land surface. Channels are the paths that the water flows in. Meanders are the curves in the channels. Oxbow lakes are bodies of water that are cut off from the main channel. Floodplains are the areas of land that are flooded during a flood.
- 1.3 Define drainage basin and divide. A drainage basin is the area of land that drains into a single body of water. A divide is the line that separates two drainage basins.
- 1.4 Define drainage patterns: dendritic, radial, rectangular, and trellis. Dendritic drainage patterns are the most common and are characterized by a main channel with many smaller tributaries. Radial drainage patterns are characterized by a central point from which the water flows outwards. Rectangular drainage patterns are characterized by a network of channels that meet at right angles. Trellis drainage patterns are characterized by a network of channels that follow the same course for a long distance.
- 1.5 Describe how erosion, transportation, and deposition are affected by grain size and velocity. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. Transportation is the process of moving the eroded material. Deposition is the process of dropping the eroded material. Grain size and velocity are important factors that affect all three processes.
- 1.6 Define alluvial fans, alluvial cones, and alluvial plains. Alluvial fans are fans of sediment that are deposited at the base of a mountain. Alluvial cones are cones of sediment that are deposited at the base of a mountain. Alluvial plains are flat areas of land that are covered by sediment.
- 1.7 Describe how the sediment is deposited by a meandering river. A meandering river is a river that flows in a series of loops. The sediment is deposited on the outer bank of the loop, which is called a point bar.
- 1.8 Describe the meandering river's erosion and deposition. A meandering river is a river that flows in a series of loops. The erosion occurs on the outer bank of the loop, which is called a cut bank. The deposition occurs on the inner bank of the loop, which is called a point bar.
- 1.9 Define the different types of sediment transport: bed load, suspended load, and dissolved load. Bed load is the sediment that is transported along the bottom of the river. Suspended load is the sediment that is transported in the water. Dissolved load is the sediment that is transported in the water as ions.
