- † The English version given in this translation was prepared from the German original. Prof. Michael R. Jones, who has been working there since its founding, took the German version.

Abstract—This study examined the effects of a 12-week, supervised, group-based, low-impact aerobically demanding exercise program on the physical and psychological health of 100 obese, sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to improve cardiovascular fitness, reduce body weight, and improve self-esteem. The program was evaluated using a pretest and posttest design. The results showed that the program had a significant positive effect on cardiovascular fitness, body weight, and self-esteem. The program was well accepted by the participants and was found to be a viable option for the management of obesity in middle-aged women.
