Notes on All Documents

1. The sections highlighted in red are related to Legislation and should not be changed without reference to an appropriate professional
2. Sections highlighted in Yellow indicate where you should personalise these for your needs, i.e. people/company names etc
3. Sections Highlighted in Green indicate areas which you can personalise to suit your needs
4. Sections Highlighted in Blue are explanatory commentary that should generally be deleted before use

Notes on This Document

1. First Impressions count
2. The following template is designed to help you to set down all the information and reference material that a new employee needs when they start employment with you.
3. The suggested headings are to give you a compressive framework and should be customised for your company needs
4. By providing this type of reference material wasted time will be minimised, i.e. The need to ask every time a new employee needs to know a basic piece of information will be minimised as well as time wasted trying to figure it out for themselves. How often have you, as a new employee spent 'forever' trying to figure out how to use the photocopier rather than admit that you can't do something 'that simple', remember, it is only simple because you do it every day!
5. If an employee feels that they have been well inducted into an organisation it will help ensure that:
  - a. They are happy with their new career choice
  - b. It will give an immediate impression of a professional company
  - c. They will be able to quickly get on with their job without unnecessary delays such as not having access to their e-mail, or not knowing who the key contact in an organisation is
6. By developing an induction manual you will ensure that all relevant information is included, and therefore nothing is forgotten during the induction process
7. It is also good practice to get new employees to provide feedback about what was missing/unnecessary in order to ensure that the next new starter has an even better induction.

Hospitality Retail Management Conrad Lashley, 2009-11-03 Hospitality Retail Management provides students and managers with a practical guide to managing units in hospitality retail organizations Customers rely on a particular chain of hotels restaurants or pubs to provide the same level of service and environment across the board This standardised service provides the customer with the security of knowing what to expect from that particular organisation However this standardisation allows little room for creativity for individual managers to respond to the particular needs of their local market There is a growing realisation that there is greater profitability if the chain can offer both standardised services across all its retail operations while at the same time allowing local managers the freedom to interpret the needs of its local market as they see fit Hospitality Retail Management shows managers and students how competitive advantage can be gained by adopting management techniques which are both tight and loose and demonstrates how you can manage businesses with well defined objectives while also allowing local managers to interpret their local market as they see fit Conrad Lashley has done extensive consultancy with companies such as McDonalds and uses case studies from these companies to reiterate key issues throughout the text

Training in the Retail Sector in the French and Flemish-speaking Communities in Belgium Ignace Pollet, European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training, 1994 An international team of researchers studied the following aspects of training in Belgium s retail sector structure and characteristics institutional and social context employment and labor changing conditions and their implications for skill requirements and training and recruitment Data were collected from an analysis of social and labor employment statistics literature review and case studies of a chain of 47 supermarkets with 2 000 employees half are part timers and a company consisting of six chains including 147 discount food stores 45 supermarkets and 6 restaurants and employing approximately 8 800 individuals In both cases at least some systematic approach to planning training was evident In the first case permanent training initiatives focused primarily on product knowledge but also included some degree of training in marketing customer service and improved communication between departments Training was planned delivered internally through short courses offered in quick succession In the second company training focused on practical knowledge with some attention to socio normative skills and was contracted from external providers on a yearly basis Training was not linked to the national education system or any sectoral programs in either company and neither company conducted any systematic evaluation of training costs and benefits Fifty five tables figures are included Contains 28 references MN I.
