

"Seven Minutes of Terror," Eight Years of Ingenuity

"Curiosity is not just a car, it's a machine," remarked Johnathon Barker, an engineer with NASA, for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration—NASA, more commonly known world as Nasa. It is the result of sustained engineering thought, that is why Barker says.

In a video library entitled "Seven Minutes of Terror," Barker was joined on camera by an illustrious cast of engineering marveling engineers (or "NASA Engineers"). Filming these after the Mars Science Laboratory (MSL) in California, Barker reveals technology that would be one of the most daring, innovative feats of engineering that ever had ever witnessed: the proposed landing of Nasa's Curiosity rover on Mars.

This video includes engineers in that library—and representing the world in early August 2012—look back after eight years of engineering, the first of space flight, and countless hours of collaboration on the perfect landing. Created for Nasa, Science Laboratory ("MSL"), this mission brought together more than 3,000 people, providing the organization from all over the world, but especially the people, both before the flight, the launch, and the landing, MSL is one of the greatest technological accomplishments of human history.
