Introduction

Learning English for professional purposes (EPP) is fundamental for students engaged in sports related faculties; in fact, it positively affects their overall knowledge and cultural background, as well as it increases their professional opportunities as coaches, teachers, or future researchers (Castroverde and Cappaix, 2009). However, the association "English first" underlined that engagement in EPP classes and motivation towards learning it are low among Mexican university students. The aim of this study is to validate the Attitude/Motivation Test Battery (AMTB) assessing motivation towards learning English (Barber and MacIntyre, 2003) in the Mexican context.

Materials & Methods

Sample: We selected 242 students attending the first semester at the Faculty of Sports Organization of Monterrey (Mexico).

The original AMTB (Barber, 1998) was originally created for a target population of English as a foreign students attending French classes. Accordingly, a version focusing on English as a second language was proposed by Barber (1998) and adapted to the Mexican context (Fernández-Pinto, 2011), but not validated. The first Mexican version is composed by 88 items distributed into nine dimensions, using Likert scale from total disagreement (1) to total agreement (7).

Procedure: Students were asked to answer the AMTB during the first week of the semester, before sitting for the English placement test.

Results & Discussion

The first reliability analysis highlighted the presence of 13 conflicting items, which were subsequently removed. Overall reliability for the instrument without the conflicting items was found to be excellent ($\alpha = .95$).
