

Physical Measurement Instructions and Other Information

Overview

Background: Studies with 11-year-olds from 1977-1997. Studies with 21 adults date from the years 1979-1999. Following this study from Study with 1, there is total of 22-years of study data. We will be working the discharge data; calculating percentage increases; and producing the discharge of treatment found exactly the data provided. Follow the procedure below.

1. For Study with 1, create the graph found discharge in terms of magnitude, starting with 1 for the largest and ending with 22 for the smallest. Label the x-axis "Study" and the y-axis "Discharge".
2. Use the formula $Y = X \cdot 100$ to determine the percentage increase of each of the 22 studies in the study with 1. The results should be labeled in the "Percentage Increase" column of the table.
3. Generate the graph paper provided in this activity. The Measurement Interval is given in minutes along the horizontal axis using a logarithmic scale. The graph spans all 1-year measurements for the study for 1,000 years. We will be plotting the growth of discharge for the study with 1. The x-axis is labeled "Study" and the y-axis is labeled "Discharge".
4. Plot the discharge and measurement interval for each of the 22 studies from Study with 1. Using a ruler, draw a line for the growth of discharge for each study. If you do not know how to draw a line for the study, use your calculator. The line should extend to the right of the graph for the study with 1.
5. Now follow steps 1-4 above for Study with 2. Now working the discharge magnitudes from 1-22. Use a different color pen for the Study with 2 results than the Study with 1.
6. Group the data, graph, and label your lines along Study. Answer the questions on the following page.

Study with 1: Study with 1				Study with 2: Study with 2
