Gestures in Language Development Marianne Gullberg, Kees de Bot, 2010-12-15 Gestures are prevalent in communication and tightly linked to language and speech As such they can shed important light on issues of language development across the lifespan This volume originally published as a Special Issue of Gesture Volume 8 2 2008 brings together studies from different disciplines that examine language development in children and adults from varying perspectives It provides a review of common theoretical and empirical themes and the contributions address topics such as

gesture use in prelinguistic infants the relationship between gestures and lexical development in typically and atypically developing children and in second language learners what gestures reveal about discourse and how all languages that adult second language speakers know can influence each other The papers exemplify a vibrant new field of study with relevance for multiple disciplines Resources in Education ,1989-11 Language Development James Law,Sheena Reilly,Cristina McKean,2022-08-25 The majority of children acquire language effortlessly but approximately 10% of all children find it difficult especially in the early or preschool years with consequences for many aspects of their subsequent development and experience literacy social skills educational qualifications mental health and employment With contributions from an international team of researchers this book is the first to draw together a series of new analyses of data related to children s language development primarily from large scale nationally representative population studies and to bring a public health perspective to the field The book begins with a section on factors influencing the patterns of language development A second section explores continuity and change in language development over time The third explores the impact on individuals with developmental language disorders DLD the effectiveness of available interventions and broader issues about the need for equity in the delivery of services to those with DLD North Park College Catalog North Park College and Theological Seminary,1927 Lippincott's New Medical Dictionary Henry Ware Cattell,1910 Catalog Kansas State Teachers College of Emporia,1918 Global Variation in Literacy Development Ludo Verhoeven,Sonali Nag,Charles Perfetti,Kenneth Pugh,2023-12-07 Through a range of multi disciplinary case studies this book provides a framework for variation in literacy development around the globe Balancing Reading & Language Learning Mary Cappellini,2005 Combining the best classroom practices and research on teaching reading and language acquisition Mary Cappellini integrates effective reading instruction with effective language instruction Through the framework of a balanced reading program she emphasizes the importance of constantly listening for and assessing children s language and reading strategies during read aloud shared reading guided reading and independent reading including literature circles BOOK JACKET Language Acquisition in Diverse Linguistic, Social and Cognitive Circumstances Maria Garraffa,Maria Teresa Guasti,Theodoros Marinis,Gary Morgan,2019-01-24 The language experience of children developing in linguistically diverse environments is subject to considerable variation both in terms of quantity and quality of language exposure It is an open question how to investigate language exposure patterns and more important which factors are relevant for successful language learning For example children acquiring a minority language including a signed language are exposed to less variety of input than children acquiring a more global language This is because they are living in a smaller linguistic community and with fewer occasions to use the language in everyday life Despite this reduced input most native signers are successful language learners In contrast native language competence is not always achieved in signing deaf children with hearing parents or those with cochlear implants learning a spoken language A similar outcome but with very different reasons has also been reported for hearing children with language impairment. In these populations, acquisition of morphosyntactic aspects is developing atypically, ending with an uncomplete linguistic repertoire. The circumstances of exposure during language development tend to differ in significant ways with respect to a large number of factors such as i) length, quality and quantity of input; ii) social status and attitudes toward the language; iii) cognitive abilities required for language learning; and iv) age of first exposure. Having early exposure to a range of different speakers is important in the acquisition of any language and may affect language proficiency. However, negative societal attitudes or a cognitive based disadvantage may create an unfavourable learning environment that prevents language learning from surfacing typically. This situation inevitably generates a different type of exposure for the child and consequently different language competence. In this Research Topic, we intend to encourage the debate on social, linguistic and cognitive factors at play for designing an effective environment for language acquisition, aiming at integrating linguistic variables coming from theoretical studies on language with environmental variables such as measures of language input or cognitive abilities on functions ancillary to language development.
