Wednesday, February 7, 2018

Step 1: Topics

Step 2: Research

- Start general key words in search engines, encyclopedias, almanacs, etc.
- Look at site extensions (.edu, .gov, .com, .biz, .org, etc.)
- Use both online and print materials. Utilize your library! Many print materials can also be accessed online (newspapers, magazines, and journals)
- Your research notes should be organized, neat, and easily accessed. Writing down your APA citation information with your notes will speed up the writing process later on.

Step 3: Your Thesis

- What is your thesis? Determine what you are trying to accomplish in your essay/paper.
- The purpose of the research paper is to convince your audience that your event is significant and should be included in a "Top 10 List".
- Be sure to remember your audience

Step 4: Outline

- After conducting most of research you should know the focus of your paper. Creating an outline can help organize and focus your paper.
- All points must relate to the same major topic that you first mentioned in your capital Roman numeral. (example to follow)
- The purpose of an outline is to help you think through your topics and carefully and organize it logically before you start writing. A good outline is the most important step in writing a good paper.
