Exercise 1

Use the CARS model to identify the rhetorical moves made in the 3 extracts below:

EXTRACT 1:

"The Visual and The Verbal: A Case Study in Macroeconomics," Ann M. Johns
Although EAP researchers have devoted considerable attention to written texts, less has been paid to the use of visual representation in the disciplines. After reviewing the literature from several fields, this paper describes the strategies of a first year university student as she privileges visual texts in both her macroeconomics and reading/writing classes. Suggestions for research and pedagogy relating to visual representation conclude the paper.

EXTRACT 2:

"Dissertation Writing in Action: The Development of a Dissertation Writing Support Program for ESL Graduate Research Students," Desmond Allison, Linda Cooley, Jo Lewkowicz and David Nunan

Despite an explosion in the number of students writing graduate theses in a language other than their first, there are very few accounts, either of research into the difficulties encountered by these students, or of writing programs designed to help such students present dissertations written to an acceptable standard. This article describes and evaluates a program developed within the English Centre at the University of Hong Kong to assist students who are required to present dissertations in English. The program was based on data collected from detailed interviews with graduate supervisors and a survey of graduate students, as well as an analysis of extended pieces of graduate writing."

EXTRACT 3: (this example is taken from "Implicit actions and explicit outcomes: cultural-academic interactions in writing journal research articles." By A.Prince, A.S.Blicblau, and B.Soesatyo. Paper presented at the Joint Annual Conference of AARE and NZARE, held in Melbourne, Vic 29th November to 2nd December, 1999.)

The use of variable frequency microwave (VFM) oven for material processing has been recently recognized and utilized by a few material researchers in the world as an emerging new microwave heating technique, in light of improving the use of 2.45 GHz fixe frequency single mode microwave heating units. VFM ovens offers significant advantages over the successfully widely used fixed frequency single mode microwave unit because for instance, it gives uniform electric field distribution in the microwave oven cavity and fully controllable operation heating system. VFM oven has been designed and developed jointly by Lambda Technology Inc, a company specializing in the scale up of microwave energy equipment and Oak Ridge national Laboratory, Department of Energy, USA, which aims to improve heating uniformity problems of microwave heating and the limitation of scale up commonly encountered by the use of single mode microwaves units. This relatively new technology had been employed for advanced materials processing: polymerization, composite processing, ceramics sintering,
