Handbook of Quality Assurance in Mental Health Alex R. Rodriguez, Sharon A. Shueman, 2013-11-09. professional standards review organizations (PSRO) in defining quality of care for the Medicare program, it is a shared responsibility of health professionals and government to provide a reasonable basis for confidence that action will be taken both to assess whether services meet professionally recognized standards and to correct any deficiencies that may be found p 14 Similar pronouncements have been made for the quality assurance activities of the Department of Defense's CHAMPUS program and of the 1980s successor to the PSROs the federally designated peer review organizations PROs established to ensure quality and utilization efficient care for Medicare Links between the federal and state governments and between professional associations and private review entities have been developed to make this shared responsibility manifest in the delivery and reimbursement of health services This responsibility is seen in light of both professional and legal accountability a view noted by Gibson and Singhas 1978 and Alger 1980 Accountability then becomes a concentric concept that elaborates on the pure view of quality and reflects the federal government's consumer protection activities during the 1970s The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals JCAH which has provided another primary historical leadership role in defining quality assurance has promoted the evolution of the concept of resource limitations as a part of the definition of quality assurance

Making Life Work Jack Levinson, Group homes emerged in the United States in the 1970s as a solution to the failure of the large institutions that for more than a century segregated and abused people with intellectual and developmental disabilities Yet community services have not for the most part delivered on the promises of rights self determination and integration made more than thirty years ago and critics predominantly portray group homes simply as settings of social control Making Life Work is a clear eyed ethnography of a New York City group home based on more than a year of field research Jack Levinson shows how the group home needs the knowledgeable and voluntary participation of residents and counselors alike The group home is an actual workplace for counselors but for residents group home work involves working on themselves to become more autonomous Levinson reveals that rather than being seen as the antithesis of freedom the group home must be understood as representing the fundamental dilemmas between authority and the individual in contemporary liberal societies No longer inmates but citizens these people who are presumed rightly or wrongly to lack the capacity for freedom actually govern themselves Levinson a former group home counselor demonstrates that the group home depends on the very capacities for independence and individuality it cultivates in the residents At the same time he addresses the complex relationship between services and social control in the history of intellectual and developmental disabilities interrogating broader social service policies and the role of clinical practice in the community Medicare Atypical Antipsychotic Drug Claims for Elderly Nursing Home Residents ,
