Shooting the Messenger Paul Moorcraft, 2011-10-31 Wars have dominated politics since history began In the modern era most of what the media reports on foreign conflicts comes from a small band of war correspondents As the furore over the Iraq Afghan and now the Libyan wars demonstrates Western governments and militaries often collude to keep their voters in the dark about the causes and the conduct of wars waged in their name In this entertaining and unspun account of modern war reporting the authors ask whether the media itself drives democracies to war Or does it serve to constrain evil ignorant and messianic leaders Are the heirs of William Howard Russell the first modern war reporter watchdogs or lapdogs In the age of Wikileaks and corrupt media empires what is the political impact of war correspondents Are they the heroes or harlots of their profession

Shooting the Messenger Paul L. Moorcraft, Philip M. Taylor, 2008-06-30 As the literature on military media relations grows it is informed by antagonism either from journalists who report on wars or from ex soldiers in their memoirs Academics who attempt more judicious accounts rarely have any professional military or media experience A working knowledge of the operational constraints of both professions underscores Shooting the Messenger A veteran war correspondent and think tank director Paul L Moorcraft has served in the British Ministry of Defence while historian by training Philip M Taylor is a professor of international communications who has lectured widely to the U S military and at NATO institutions Some of the topics they examine in this wide ranging history of military media relations are the interface between soldiers and civilian reporters covering conflicts the sometimes grey area between reporters right or need to know and the operational security constraints imposed by the military the military's manipulation of journalists who accept it as a trade off for safer battlefield access the resultant gap between images of war and their reality the evolving nature of media technology and the difficulties and opportunities this poses to the military journalistic performance in reporting conflict as an observer or a participant Moorcraft and Taylor provide a bridge over which each side can pass and a path to mutual understanding

Sound in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction David Suisman,Susan

Strasser,2011-10-11 During the twentieth century sound underwent a dramatic transformation as new technologies and social practices challenged conventional aural experience As a result sound functioned as a means to exert social cultural and political power in unprecedented and unexpected ways The fleeting nature of sound has long made it a difficult topic for historical study but innovative scholars have recently begun to analyze the sonic traces of the past using innovative approaches Sound in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction investigates sound as part of the social construction of historical experience and as an element of the sensory relationship people have to the world showing how hearing and listening can inform people s feelings ideas decisions and actions The essays in Sound in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction uncover the varying dimensions of sound in twentieth century history Together they connect a host of disparate concerns from issues of gender and technology to contests over intellectual property and government regulation Topics covered range from debates over listening practices and good citizenship in the 1930s to Tokyo Rose and Axis radio propaganda during World War II to CB radio culture on the freeways of Los Angeles in the 1970s These and other studies reveal the contingent nature of aural experience and demonstrate how a better grasp of the culture of sound can enhance our understanding of the past
