Ghana

Like we discussed Christmas trees, Ghanaians in Ghana decorate outdoor spaces or string trees to mark the festive period. They also go to church in the evening and have singing and dancing. Family time is important in Ghana, they eat a meal of rice with chicken or goat, along with a serving of fufu (a dish made from ground and stirred cassava).

Italy

In England, children have their Christmas presents delivered to them on Christmas, but in Italy it is the day after the 6th of December.

It is not the same as in Italy as we need to wait for the 6th of January and the children are not allowed to open their presents until then.

The night is long, and the children are not allowed to open their presents until then.

Christmas presents are also delivered to them on the 6th of January, and the children are not allowed to open their presents until then.

Australia

When you think of Christmas, you might think of cold weather, snowmen and reindeer, but in Australia, they celebrate this festive holiday during their summer. The reason Australians often choose to eat their Christmas meal on beach or have a BBQ. Can you imagine sitting on the beach on Christmas Day?

Christmas trees in every house

Spain

Most people in Spain spend Midnight Mass on Christmas Eve. It is called 'Misa de la Noche' because a misa is mass. It is held on the night of Jesus' birth. They call Christmas Eve 'Nochebuena' and children spend the day singing carols to their neighbors, hoping to get some money. After the midnight service, many people then walk through the streets carrying lanterns, beating drums and playing guitar.
