

3. Guide to residential development

Brisbane City Plan 2014 (City Plan) has been developed by Brisbane City Council in consultation with the community to support a simple, fast and clear development assessment process. The plan guides how land in Brisbane can be used and developed to support population growth, while protecting our city's enviable way of life.

Brisbane City Plan 2014 replaces Brisbane City Plan 2000.

This guide provides an overview of common types of residential development, where they can be located and how they are assessed. For more information about dwelling houses refer to the Guide to the development of dwelling houses on Council's website.

Types of residential development

The Queensland Planning Provisions (QPP) include standard definitions for a variety of residential development forms that have been incorporated into the definitions in Schedule 1 of the City Plan. The following are some of the common types of residential development in Brisbane.

- Dwelling house: A single dwelling on its own lot. A dwelling house may share a common wall with an adjacent building and can also include a secondary dwelling (granny flat).
- Dual occupancy: Two houses on one lot; they may be attached or separated.
- Multiple dwelling: Three or more dwellings on one lot. This includes townhouses, villas and apartments.
- Rooming accommodation: A dwelling that accommodates more than one household, such as student accommodation or a boarding house.
- Short-term accommodation: Temporary accommodation for tourists or travellers such as a motel, backpackers or serviced apartments.

Character residential zone

The CR1 Character zone precinct is predominantly intended for detached character dwelling houses, secondary dwellings and home-based businesses. Existing dwellings built in 1946 or before are to be retained, and extensions or renovations should maintain the original parts of the dwelling. New dwellings are to be designed to complement Brisbane's traditional character.

Under Brisbane City Plan 2000 the CR1 Character zone precinct was predominantly land in the Low density residential area classification within the Demolition control precinct.

In the CR2 Infill housing zone precinct, existing dwellings built in 1946 or before are to be retained, and any extensions or renovations must maintain the original parts of the dwelling. New multiple dwellings of up to two storeys can be developed between or behind character houses.

Consistent with Brisbane City Plan 2000, new development must be compatible in form, scale, materials and detailing to complement Brisbane's traditional character.

The CR2 Infill housing zone precinct was predominantly land that was in the Character residential area classification under Brisbane City Plan 2000.
