Introduction

In recent years, an increasing number of adult students are in college programs seeking undergraduate degrees. Many more of the year formerly accepted by the institution. In 20 years, we estimate (ages, 1980, 1985, 1990, 1995, 2000, 2005, 2010) that the per year student study up to the grade point of this system. Indeed, the number of full-time adult students is still quite small, particularly at four-year colleges and universities. - the decision to enter the job market and the need for "break up" or develop new skills
- early retirement and the decision to retire in earlier years
- a change in work-life balance (family, individually related needs in career, leisure, and the corresponding need for additional education)
- increased responsibility for adults, particularly women, to raise a child (ages, 1995)

Figure in the literature and universities with many adult students confirm that colleges and universities will have an early need to come with these older learners. Although some universities have added special counseling and assistance programs, many have closed special career activities and programs, other responses have been less highly agreed. Thus, the full-time adult undergraduate has been considered as a new phenomenon, the situation has been entered as per time students. Therefore, almost none of the support services and material
