Prefab Homes Elisabeth Blanchet:

Prefab Homes Elisabeth Blanchet, 2014-10-10 At the end of the Second World War Winston Churchill promised to manufacture half a million prefabricated bungalows to ease the housing shortage in the end more than 156 000 temporary prefabs were delivered Nicknamed Palaces for the People and with convenient kitchens bathrooms and heating systems they proved popular and instead of being demolished as intended they were defended by residents who campaigned to keep their family homes and communities Nearly seventy years later as the last of these two bedroom homes are being demolished Elisabeth Blanchet tells the story of these popular dwellings and their gardens and shows the various designs that were produced Through the stories and memories of residents she also reveals the communities who were pleased to live in the prefabs Between Conventional and Experimental Regine Hess, Inbal Ben-Asher Gitler, Tzafrir Fainholtz, Yael Allweil, 2024-10-07 Mass housing and prefabrication shaped global modernist architecture like no other aspect of industrialised construction This book offers a comprehensive exploration of how both conventional and experimental prototypes and series gave rise to an architecture for all and responded to crises nation building and housing shortages within the context of transnational and regional research The book's contributions explore partially unearthed empirical ground such as cases from Finland and Sweden while others offer a fresh interpretation of prefabrication's role in the history of global architecture notably in the USSR and Italy The chapters topics encompass colonial expansion class international collaboration and the achievements and setbacks of industrialised design The authors scrutinise the cultural impact of mass housing and prefabrication tracing this influence through exhibitions memory culture and typologies ultimately concluding with an outlook on the preservation and repair of structures and their adaptation for the future Prefabs Elisabeth Blanchet, Sonia Zhuravlyova, 2018 As slums were cleared all across England after the Blitz in World War II the need for housing became pressing and prefabrication was quickly embraced as a temporary solution The resulting bungalows with slightly pitched roofs pretty gardens and all modern conveniences became home to hundreds of thousands of people around the country including many who had not previously had the luxury of hot running water or a fridge These squat little homes were meant to last just a decade a mere stopgap as the country got back on its feet but many of the prefabs are still standing today with residents often fighting to hold on to them Responding to growing public interest in these fast disappearing houses and the communities they fostered this book recounts residents first hand experiences from the first time they laid eyes on these little castles to their attempts to hold onto them beyond their designated short term time frame Authors consider the relative success of postwar prefab housing in the wider context of British social housing and examine clever solutions being put forward to solve the housing crisis today Fewer and fewer prefabs remain but you can still spot them here and there across the English landscape sitting cozily among their big brick built neighbors a lesson in thoughtful design and community building Eviction Jessica Field, 2025-09-16 Grounded in personal experience Eviction uncovers a hidden history of housing injustice and working class resistance in what has become a perennial battleground for social conflict in modern Britain In 2017 Jessica Field's parents and more than a hundred of their neighbours received warning of imminent eviction Their corporate landlord intended to demolish their affordable privately rented homes to replace them with middle class houses for sale Led by the women of the estate tenants launched an anti eviction campaign to save their close knit community from destruction The neighbourhood was the last remnant of a 1950s National Coal Board estate constructed to house local miners When the coal industry declined in the 1970s whole estates were auctioned off to speculators Low income tenants were at the mercy of global investors Houses were left to rot Rents soared Tenants were exploited every step of the way Yet time and again tenant activists especially women fought back Eviction is a history of the British housing crisis in microcosm
