

European Imperialism in Africa

During the 1800s, the colonization of Africa was taken over by Europe. The countries gained money, resources, and the power while imperializing the countries of Africa. The Europeans were fascinated by the geography and the resources that Africa had to offer. Although, the imperialism did have an impact on the future of Africa. The European Imperialism in Africa influenced the future of the citizens in Africa and Africa as a whole in three ways, the forced labor or slavery from the countries with valuable resources, the forced spread of Christianity, and the decreasing amounts of resources in Africa because of the abundant amount of trade.

All across Africa, Catholic and Protestant missionaries attempted to win people to Christianity. The missionaries believed the African cultures and religions were devalued. They attempted to help Africans reject their own traditions in favor of Western civilization. They also built schools and medical clinics alongside churches. The missionaries saw the Africans as children in need of guidance. Just by the missionaries changing their religious beliefs has already influenced the future of Africa. In the poem The White Man's Burden states, "Your new-caught sullen peoples, half-devil and half child". This refers to the belief of the Europeans that Africans resigned to live a life of savagery. The missionaries would degrade the culture and society of the African people.

With all of the natural resources Africa had to offer, slavery came along with it. Countries such as Congo, which had an abundant amount of rubber and ivory, had slavery. Millions of Congolese died because of the forced labor and slavery. This influenced the future of Africa and Africans because all of their resources are now gone and are being used in other countries. While they were slaves, they had no right to any of their own country's materials. The future of Africa was also changed because of the death toll, economic change, and the environmental destruction resulting from wars. The countries also weren't able to increase any of their agricultural production because an industrialization is needed first before it is even possible to have a stable agricultural production.

The future of Africa was also influenced by the decreasing amounts of resources in Africa because of the abundant amount of trade. The imperialist countries essentially would raid any resources they could find in the African colonies. Africa contained copper, cotton, tea, diamonds, tin, palm oil, and many other resources that made Africa a gold mine. When imperialists came and raided all of Africa's valuable resources, they would be traded to other countries. European powers created a cash crop agriculture system by building a major trade network. Since the European's had power of the resources, they were able to create the value of the resource to whatever they wished it to be. Africa is now stripped of their resources and are lacking in many needed materials.

Africa as a Living Laboratory Helen Tilley, 2011-04-15 Tropical Africa was one of the last regions of the world to experience formal European colonialism a process that coincided with the advent of a range of new scientific specialties and research methods Africa as a Living Laboratory is a far reaching study of the thorny relationship between imperialism and the role of scientific expertise environmental medical racial and anthropological in the colonization of British Africa A key source for Helen Tilley s analysis is the African Research Survey a project undertaken in the 1930s to explore how modern science was being applied to African problems This project both embraced and recommended an interdisciplinary approach to research on Africa that Tilley argues underscored the heterogeneity of African environments and the interrelations among the problems being studied While the aim of British colonialists was unquestionably to transform and modernize Africa their efforts Tilley contends were often unexpectedly subverted by scientific concerns with the local and vernacular Meticulously researched and gracefully argued Africa as a Living Laboratory transforms our understanding of imperial history colonial development and the role science played in both A World History of Mobility Gijs Mom, 2025-08-01 As a tool of globalized mobility the car provides a useful barometer for charting the global development of socio cultural economic technical and political modernization Shaped by prevailing gender and racial norms and popularized by a Western driven car culture it is a commodity whose access and use embodies wider inequalities In this comprehensive world history of auto mobility Gijs Mom draws upon his extensive research into the field to assess the past and present of road cultures and hypothesize their future Ranging from the impact of climate change to decolonization this volume spotlights how profoundly automobilism impacts our sense of identity and imagination

Dress and Cultural Difference in Early Modern Europe Cornelia Aust, Denise Klein, Thomas Weller, 2019-10-08 Dress is a key marker of difference It is closely attached to the body part of the daily routine and an unavoidable means of communication The clothes people wear tell stories about their allegiances and identities but also about their exclusion and stigmatization They allow for the display of wealth and can mercilessly display poverty and indigence Clothes also enable people to play with identities and affinities for instance individuals can claim higher social status via their clothes In many ways dress is thus open to manipulation by the wearer and misinterpretation by the observer Authorities whether religious or secular local or regional have always aimed at imposing order on this potential muddle This is particularly true for the early modern era when the world became ever more complex In Europe the composition of societies diversified with the emergence of new social groups and increasing migration and travel Thanks to intensified long distance trade and technological developments new fashionable clothes and accessories entered the market With the emergence of a consumer culture it was now the case that not only the extremely wealthy could afford at least the occasional indulgence in luxury items and accessories Over recent years research has focused on a variety of areas related to dress and appearance in the context of early modern political socio economic and cultural transformations both within Europe and related to its entanglement with other parts of the world Nevertheless a significant compartmentalization in the research on dress and appearance remains research is often organized around particular cities and territories and much research is still framed by modern national boundaries This special issue looks at dress and its perception in Europe from a transcultural perspective and highlights the many differences that clothing can express

Constructive Drinking Mary Douglas, 2013-10-16 First published in 1987 Constructive Drinking is a series of original case studies organized into three sections based on three major functions of drinking The three constructive functions are that drinking has a real social role in everyday life that drinking can be used to construct an ideal world and that drinking is a significant economic activity The case studies deal with a variety of exotic drinks

The Ideas That Rule Us Chris Grocott, 2024-10-07 It may seem surprising that the economic choices we make in society are often determined by ideas rather than scientific evidence or financial resources The consequences of such choices are often stark such as the austerity policies which eroded our ability to withstand crises like the Covid 19 pandemic This book explores the ideas that rule how our economy works how government operates and how workers organise A small number of historical economic ideas remain stubbornly prevalent and powerful today However they are largely based on questionable assumptions about human behaviour and unproven theoretical ideas about economics They were founded within the realms of philosophy and politics rather than hard science This book illustrates how politicians have selectively borrowed convenient economic concepts in order to promote and defend policies which entrench and escalate inequalities and other structural problems This accessible book invites readers to question the ideas that rule us and explore the challenges facing society It invites progressive thought about how we need to urgently organise action for the future
