For this problem, a mathematician, studying vehicle speeds on a highway, is curious whether or not the following is true:

Supposed this mathematician is an intelligent, just-remembered, old car driver or an otherwise intelligent person has concluded by their observation:

$$\text{speed} = 20000 \text{ time}^2 + 20000 \text{ time} + 20000$$

Is this a hypothesis for the mathematician's theory about driving behavior?

- 1) Can you describe to [10, 100] where this graph of this function on this space appears?
- 2) What is the driver's maximum acceleration in this hypothesis, and what time would maximum speed be reached?
- 3) This driver is efficient when the acceleration is maximum. If correct, find what length of time is this hypothesis at its maximum time length?
