

W O R C E S T E R, June 21.

A correspondent has favoured us with the following account of the battle near Charlestown, viz. "The reinforcement both of horse and foot being arrived at Boston, and our army having good intelligence that General Gage was about to take possession of the advantageous posts near Charlestown, and Dorchester-Point, the Committee of Safety advised, that our troops should prepossess them if possible; accordingly on Friday evening, the 16th instant, this was effected; and before daylight on Saturday morning, their lines of circumvallation, on a small hill south of Bunker's hill in Charlestown, was in great forwardness. At this time the Lively man of war began to fire upon them. A number of our enemy's ships, tenders and scows, or floating batteries, soon came up, from all which the firing was general by twelve o'clock. About two the enemy began to land at a point that leads out towards Noddle's island, and immediately marched up to our intrenchments, from which they were twice repulsed with great loss, but the third time they forced them. Our forces, which were in the lines, as well as those sent for their relief, were annoyed on all sides by balls and bombs from Cops-Hill, the ships, scows, &c. At this time the buildings in Charlestown appeared in flames in almost every quarter, supposed to be kindled by hot balls. Though this scene was horrible, and altogether new to most of our men; yet many stood and received wounds, by swords and bayonets before they quitted their lines. The number of killed and wounded on our side is not yet known. Our men are in high spirits.

The number of regulars that were engaged is supposed to be between two and three thousand.
