These relationships, and the corresponding strategies proposed by companies, are discussed below. In general, these companies, and therefore, their relationships, are well positioned to help the customer meet the challenge of managing the most complex business systems.

The American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers (ASHRAE) has announced that it will accept a new standard for energy-efficient buildings. The standard, known as ASHRAE 90.1-2001, will require buildings to meet a minimum energy efficiency level. The standard will be based on the energy consumption of the building's envelope, including walls, windows, doors, and roofs. The standard will also take into account the building's heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC) system. The standard will be applicable to all new buildings and existing buildings that are undergoing major renovations. The standard will be enforced by the International Energy Conservation Code (IECC).
