Not Quite a Clean Sweep: Rhetorical Strategies in Grose's "Cleaning: The Final Feminist Frontier"

A woman's work is never done: many American women grow up with this saying and feel it to be true. One such woman, author Jessica Grose, wrote "Cleaning: The Final Feminist Frontier," published in 2013 in the New Republic, and she argues that while the men in our lives recently started taking on more of the childcare and cooking, cleaning still falls unfairly on women. Grose begins building her credibility with personal facts and reputable sources, citing convincing facts and statistics, and successfully employing emotional appeals; however, toward the end of the article, her attempts to appeal to readers' emotions weaken her credibility and ultimately, her argument.

In her article, Grose first sets the stage by describing a specific scenario of house-cleaning with her husband after being shut in during Hurricane Sandy, and then she outlines the uneven distribution of cleaning work in her marriage and draws a comparison to the larger feminist issue of who does the cleaning in a relationship. Grose continues by discussing some of the reasons that men do not contribute to cleaning: the praise for a clean house goes to the woman; advertising and media praise men's cooking and childcare, but not cleaning; and lastly, it is just not fun. Possible solutions to the problem, Grose suggests, include making a chart of who does which chores, dividing up tasks based on skill and ability, accepting a dirtier home, and making cleaning more fun with gadgets.

Throughout her piece, Grose uses many strong sources that strengthen her credibility and appeal to ethos, as well as build her argument. These sources include, "sociologists Judith Treas and Tsui-o Tai," "a 2008 study from the University of New Hampshire," and "P&G North America Fabric Care Brand Manager, Matthew Krehbiel" (qtd. in Grose). Citing these sources boosts Grose's credibility by showing that she has

Action Research into Teaching English in Russia's Professional Context Natalia A. Gunina, 2015-10-13 This book is a result of the investigative attempts of linguistics professionals to identify and meet the challenges of developing communicative competence in future engineers economists and other such specialists The unifying feature of all the contributions brought together here is the active involvement of the authors in practical instruction of English for specific professional purposes at the tertiary bachelors and masters programs level in Russia This volume covers a number of relevant areas in this field including new developments in methodology approaches to course and materials design and the contribution of language theory to foreign language teaching in a professional context The unique teaching approach advocated in this book denounces the traditional practice of transferring classical methodology of communicative oriented teaching to language classes for students with a non linguistic or non teaching professional orientation The underlying idea of this volume is that a change in professional context implies a change in language teaching methodology including materials techniques and target competences The ideas and experiences analysed here will appeal to anyone interested in the current trends in foreign language teaching and learning and particularly to educationalists Reading and Writing for Civic Literacy Donald Lazere, 2017-07-05 Lazere's book is heaven sent and will provide a crucial link in the chain of understanding how conflicts are structured and most importantly how they can be rationally addressed a healthy antidote to the scepticism that has become so pervasive in academic life Alan Hausman Hunter College This innovative book addresses the need for college students to develop critical reading writing and thinking skills for self defence in the contentious arena of American civic rhetoric In a groundbreaking reconception of composition theory it presents a comprehensive critical perspective on American public discourse and practical methods for its analysis Exercises following the text sections and readings help students understand the ideological positions and rhetorical patterns that underlie opposing viewpoints in current controversies such as the growing inequality of wealth in America and its impact on the finances of college students as expressed in paired sets of readings from the political left and right Widely debated issues of whether objectivity is possible and whether there is a liberal or conservative bias in news and entertainment media as well as in education itself are foregrounded as topics for rhetorical analysis Tracing the Impact of First-Year Writing Laura Wilder, 2024-11-15 Tracing the Impact of First Year Writing presents the results of a large scale longitudinal study of college writers that explores the impact of a required first year writing course with a comparative approach not previously available Over five years Laura Wilder conducted 143 interviews with and collected 774 pages of writing from 58 students half of whom had taken a new first year writing course and half who had not Wilder found that while in many ways the experiences of both groups are comparable demonstrating how students receive valuable educations in rhetoric and writing from a variety of sources beyond a first year writing course students who took the first year writing course were much more likely to identify as writers This identification supported students use of writing in powerfully generative and knowledge building ways that they carried with them long after the course into other appropriate contexts In contrast to previous longitudinal studies of college writers undertaken at institutions with high prestige and resources Tracing the Impact of First Year Writing explores the role of writing at a regional public university and documents how students experiences with writing can be highly divergent across the curriculum and unequal across campuses Additionally this book includes the voices of students who do not identify as capable writers and have strongly negative emotional reactions to writing and writing instruction and adds empirical support to innovative calls in the field to transform the first year writing course into one that inspires students to reflectively consider writing itself Instructor's Manual to Accompany Reading Rhetorically Virginia A. Sellnow, 2017-03-07 Can television shows like Modern Family popular music by performers like Taylor Swift advertisements for products like Samuel Adams beer and films such as The Hunger Games help us understand rhetorical theory and criticism The Third Edition of The Rhetorical Power of Popular Culture offers students a step by step introduction to rhetorical theory and criticism by focusing on the powerful role popular culture plays in persuading us as to what to believe and how to behave In every chapter students are introduced to rhetorical theories presented with current examples from popular culture that relate to the theory and guided through demonstrations about how to describe interpret and evaluate popular culture texts through rhetorical analysis Author Deanna Sellnow also provides sample student essays in every chapter to demonstrate rhetorical criticism in practice This edition's easy to understand approach and range of popular culture examples help students apply rhetorical theory and criticism to their own lives and assigned work Assembling Arguments Jonathan Buehl, 2016-01-20 Scientific arguments and indeed arguments in most disciplines depend on visuals and other nontextual elements however most models of argumentation typically neglect these important resources In Assembling Arguments Jonathan Buehl offers a concentrated study of scientific argumentation that is sensitive to both the historical and theoretical possibilities of multimodal persuasion as it advances two related claims First rhetorical theory when augmented with methods for reading nonverbal representations can provide the analytical tools needed to understand and appreciate multimodal scientific arguments Second science an inherently multimodal enterprise offers ideal subjects for developing general theories of multimodal rhetoric applicable across fields In developing these claims Buehl offers a comprehensive account of scientific persuasion as a multimodal process and develops a simple but productive framework for analyzing and teaching multimodal argumentation Comprising five case studies the book provides detailed treatments of argumentation in specific technological and historical contexts argumentation before World War I when images circulated by hand and by post argumentation during the mid twentieth century when computers were beginning to bolster scientific inquiry but images remained hand crafted products and argumentation at the turn of the twenty first century an era of digital revolutions and digital fraud Each study examines the rhetorical problems and strategies of specific scientists to investigate key issues regarding visualization and argument 1 establishing new instruments as reliable sources of visual evidence 2 creating novel arguments from reliable visual evidence 3 creating novel arguments with unreliable visual evidence 4 preserving the credibility of visualization practices and 5 creating multimodal artifacts before and in the era of digital circulation Given the growing enterprise of rhetorical studies and the field s contributions to communication practices in all disciplines rhetoricians need a comprehensive rhetoric of science one that accounts for the multimodal arguments that change our relation to reality Assembling Arguments argues that such rhetoric should enable the interpretation of visual scientific arguments and improve science writing instruction
