Personal Computing ,1983      Learning Modern Algebra Albert Cuoco, Joseph Rotman, 2013 Much of modern algebra arose from attempts to prove Fermat's Last Theorem which in turn has its roots in Diophantus' classification of Pythagorean triples. This book, designed for prospective and practising mathematics teachers, makes explicit connections between the ideas of abstract algebra and the mathematics taught at high school level. Algebraic concepts are presented in historical order and the book also demonstrates how other important themes in algebra arose from questions related to teaching. The focus is on number theory, polynomials and commutative rings. Group theory is introduced near the end of the text to explain why generalisations of the quadratic formula do not exist for polynomials of high degree, allowing the reader to appreciate the work of Galois and Abel. Results are motivated with specific examples and applications range from the theory of repeating decimals to the use of imaginary quadratic fields to construct problems with rational solutions.      Learning Management System Technologies and Software Solutions for Online Teaching: Tools and Applications Kats, Yefim, 2010-05-31 This book gives a general coverage of learning management systems followed by a comparative analysis of the particular LMS products, review of technologies supporting different aspects of educational process and the best practices and methodologies for LMS supported course delivery. Volume 2: Cases and Perspectives M. Kathleen Heid, Glendon W. Blume, 2008-07-01 Published in Co-operation with the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics According to NCTM's Principles and Standards for School Mathematics Technology is essential in teaching and learning of mathematics; it influences the mathematics that is taught and it enhances students' learning. How does research inform this clarion call for technology in mathematics teaching and learning? In response to the need to craft appropriate roles for technology in school mathematics, new technological approaches have been applied to the teaching and learning of mathematics and these approaches have been examined by researchers worldwide. The second volume has a dual focus: cases and perspectives. It features descriptive cases that provide accounts of the development of technology-intensive curriculum and tools. In these cases, the writers describe and analyze various roles that research played in their development work and ways in which research, curriculum development and tool development can inform each other. These thoughtful descriptions and analyses provide documentation of how this process can and does occur. The remaining chapters in the second volume address research-related issues and perspectives on the use of technology in the teaching and learning of mathematics. The lessons learned from the research presented in these volumes are lessons about teaching and learning that can be applied more broadly than solely in technological settings.      The Publishers Weekly ,1902      The Future of the Teaching and Learning of Algebra Helen Chick, 2001      Academy; a Weekly Review of Literature, Learning, Science and Art ,1869 The Poetical Gazette, the official organ of the Poetry Society and a review of poetical affairs, nos 4-7 issued as supplements to the Academy v 79 Oct 15 Nov 5 Dec 3 and 31 1910      Resources in

Nisbett,1993 This book examines two questions Do people make use of abstract rules such as logical and statistical rules when making inferences in everyday life Can such abstract rules be changed by training Contrary to the spirit of reductionist theories from behaviorism to connectionism there is ample evidence that people do make use of abstract rules of inference including rules of logic statistics causal deduction and cost benefit analysis Such rules moreover are easily alterable by instruction as it occurs in classrooms and in brief laboratory training sessions The fact that purely formal training can alter them and that those taught in one content domain can escape to a quite different domain for which they are also highly applicable shows that the rules are highly abstract The major implication for cognitive science is that people are capable of operating with abstract rules even for concrete mundane tasks therefore any realistic model of human inferential capacity must reflect this fact The major implication for education is that people can be far more broadly influenced by training than is generally supposed At high levels of formality and abstraction relatively brief training can alter the nature of problem solving for an infinite number of content domains      "The" Academy ,1896      Journal of Education ,1883      The Athenaeum ,1894
