

Keystone Species

Saguaro Cactus

What is a keystone species?

A keystone species is a species that has a disproportionately large effect on its environment relative to its abundance. The concept was developed by ecologist Robert Paine in 1969, based on his studies of intertidal rocky shore communities.

Keystone species are often predators, but they can also be engineers, mutualists, or other types of organisms. The Saguaro Cactus is a keystone species in the Sonoran Desert. It provides food and shelter for many animals, and its presence affects the structure and function of the ecosystem.

Why is the Saguaro a keystone species?

The Saguaro Cactus is a keystone species because it has a large effect on its environment relative to its abundance. It provides food and shelter for many animals, and its presence affects the structure and function of the ecosystem. For example, the Saguaro Cactus provides shelter for many birds, and its spines provide a place for birds to build nests.
