Polymerase Chain Reaction

Synopsis

In this Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) simulation, you will see through eight steps another method, known as restriction fragment length polymorphism (RFLP) analysis, for identifying the crime scene DNA sample. First, we'll go to the subject matter explained in the text that this simulation may help to understand their goals.

analyze DNA

After sampling, you will go to the next forensic investigation step: analysis of DNA. You will learn by using a technique called electrophoresis, and this simulation may help you understand how to use this current technique accurately, the PCR experiment.

learn the structure of DNA double helix explained as follows:

In the simulation, you will see that DNA is composed of two strands, each consisting of the structure of DNA and the sequence of DNA. Each strand will be used to represent the experimental process, as well as all specifications of the PCR itself.

identify the sequence

In this PCR simulation, you will collect your samples and other forensic samples from the laboratory, and you will then compare the fragments for changes. This will be the first time that this simulation.

Learning Objectives

In this part of this simulation, you will see the results:

1. Identify the sequence of DNA fragments, including the sequence and structure.
2. Explain the DNA sequence using the text, which is the first time in this simulation.
