

Master cylinder - Static description

The two main cylinders (1) are mutually connected with the connectors (2) and (3), further with the pipe (4) to the fluid reservoir (13) and with the pipes (5) to the brake cylinders.

Fluid from the fluid reservoir enters the brake main cylinder through the port (6) (pedal not engaged).

When both brake pedals are engaged, the port (6) is shut off by the seal (7), and fluid is pressed through the port (8) and the pipes (5) to the brake cylinder.

The ball (9) is lifted up in the both main cylinders (1) by the plunger (10).

When only one brake pedal is engaged, the port (6) is also shut off by the seal (7) and fluid is pressed through the port (8) and the pipe (5) to the brake cylinder. In the other main cylinder, the ball (9) is pressed down by the fluid pressure coming from the first cylinder through the connector (2) and the seal (11). The fluid flow is stopped by the seal (12).
