Household expenditures across the border generally met the needs of all. But persistent shortages of essential goods and services were reported in the general budget study of 1990, which at that time noted that most rural quarters had shortages of products such as rice, oil, and other staples, and that the general budget allocations for health, education, and other services were insufficient to meet the needs of the population.

Multi-Sector Engagement Initiatives is currently only implemented in countries where there is a significant number of stakeholders. It is used for projects that need to address the concerns of various interest groups that spanned multiple ministries and institutions in the government. This approach allows the government to build trust, develop relationships with the private sector, and ensure that the needs of all stakeholders are met. It is a key component of the government's strategy to improve its service delivery and ensure that it is responsive to the needs of its citizens.
