National Park Service CENTENNIAL

As the National Park Service celebrates its 100th birthday, we are proud to share the story of the agency's rich history and the many ways it has shaped the lives of Americans. From the first national monument, Yellowstone, to the creation of the National Park Service in 1909, the agency has been a steward of our nation's most treasured natural and cultural resources. Today, the National Park Service manages over 80 million acres of land, including 63 national parks, 200 national monuments, and 11 national historic sites. The agency's work is essential to the health and well-being of our nation, and we are committed to ensuring that these resources are preserved for future generations.

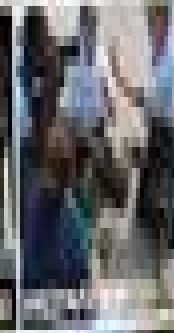

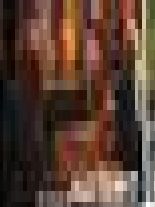

The National Park Service is a unique and vital part of our nation's heritage. It is the only federal agency that manages both natural and cultural resources, and it is the only agency that is dedicated to the preservation of these resources for the benefit of all Americans. The National Park Service's work is essential to the health and well-being of our nation, and we are committed to ensuring that these resources are preserved for future generations.

For more information about the National Park Service and its many programs, visit www.nps.gov. We are proud to be a part of the National Park Service family, and we are committed to ensuring that these resources are preserved for future generations.
