Introduction

Karen, a project manager on an important construction project, was facing a dilemma. Two months earlier, she had informed her managers of a pending financial crisis in the program office that was funding her project, but she had received no response or guidance to date on how to proceed. She knew she was nearing a critical decision point in the project, beyond which failure to make a decision could jeopardize her ability to meet project budget and schedule constraints. She wondered why she hadn't received an answer from her managers, and she was desperately trying to find a way to expedite their decision process to avert disaster on her project.

Karen's situation is all too familiar to project managers and staff members: it's often difficult to get important decisions from management in a timely fashion. What could Karen do? Luckily, one of her colleagues introduced her to the concept of decision papers.

It is a tool that helps articulate the salient issues relevant to a particular problem and facilitates the decision-making process. It is especially helpful in cases like Karen's, where the timeliness of the decision is very important.

Format

Decision papers have several critical elements that define a recommended format, although the approach within each element can vary. In all instances, the decision paper must contain concise, crisp statements, and the overall length should be limited to one or two pages. Usually pressed for time and driven by hectic schedules, most managers can't or simply won't read a document longer than that. That doesn't mean you should use a small font to squeeze as much content as possible onto one page. The decision paper's graphic layout, as well as content, is important to get your message across. No matter how carefully you prepare your decision paper, if it's difficult to read due to small font size or cramped layout, the decision-makers won't read it. It is best to use a minimum of 12-point type and organize the information into bullets or columns with adequate white space for reading ease.

The decision paper begins with an Issue or Problem Statement. For optimum effect, this section should begin with the words, "The decision to be made is...", followed by a short statement of the issue to be resolved. To demonstrate, suppose you were trying to decide whether to buy your own ski equipment. The Problem Statement might simply
