Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CG) and an exercise group (EG). The EG performed a 10-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance exercises. The CG performed no exercise. The HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 10-week training program. The results showed that the EG had a significant decrease in HR and BP compared to the CG. The decrease in HR was significant at the end of the 10-week training program ($p < 0.05$). The decrease in BP was significant at the end of the 10-week training program ($p < 0.05$). The results suggest that a 10-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Caution: Rolling, pushing, or climbing on the T-bar may cause the T-bar to fail. In particular, attempting to dismount the rail from a low or middle position (Fig. 10) may cause the T-bar to fail by overloading the top two connecting tie-downs, or by pulling the T-bar off all safety connections, possibly causing the safety lifelines to become disengaged. To be certain, only roll, push, pull, or climb on the T-bar when it is fully engaged on the lifelines.
