

Unauthorized Disclosure of Classified Information and Controlled Unclassified Information

Course Introduction

Introduction

Public service, notably service in the United States Department of Defense or DoD, is a public trust. That trust is bounded by the Oath of Office we took willingly.

To carry out our responsibilities, we are privy to some of the most sensitive and closely held information in our land. It is a violation of our oath to divulge, in any fashion, non-public DoD information, classified or unclassified, to anyone without the required security clearance as well as a specific need to know in performance of their duties. Divulging information in violation of these precepts places our troops, our intelligence operations, and our technological advantages over our foes at risk.

We must be vigilant in executing our responsibility to prevent disclosure of any information not authorized for release outside of the Department of Defense. All hands must be alert to prevent unauthorized disclosure of non-public information for any reason, whether by implied acknowledgment or intentional release.

We are a Department at war, and the increasingly complex security challenges call for increased vigilance in protecting our secrets. We must always be mindful of the obligations we have to each other and the Nation we have sworn to protect.

Course Learning Objectives
