

Lady MacBeth Character Analysis

The character of Lady Macbeth is one of the most confusing and intriguing in all of Shakespeare's works. No definitive Lady "M" has been agreed upon. Directors and actors cannot even agree as to whether or not she is a prominent character, as she disappears after the banquet scene not to reappear until the infamous sleepwalking scene. In this analysis of the role of Lady Macbeth, the focus is first on historical and critical views of Lady Macbeth. Three versions of Lady Macbeth have been considered notable since John Rice originated the role opposite Richard Burbage in 1606. These actresses are Sarah Siddons, Ellen Terry, and Judi Dench. The interpretations and the possible textual basis for the choices follow. In 1785 Sarah Siddons played Lady M to her brother John Kemble's Macbeth. Siddons was said to have been the only woman who could ever play this role. She was a strikingly beautiful woman, very tall and statuesque. The 18th century Shakespeare scholar William Hazlitt said of Siddons, "We can conceive of nothing grander. It seemed almost as if a being of superior order had been dropped from a higher sphere to awe the world with the majesty of her appearance. Power was seated in her brow, passion emanated from her breast as from a shrine. She was a tragedy personified." Siddons choice made Lady Macbeth a ruthlessly ambitious woman who dominated her husband. Her brother's Macbeth was said to have been in a constant state of blindly rushing towards and from his ambitions. Siddons countered this by being absolutely firm and even masculine in her desires. She became the strongest of the pair.

Hazlitt said, "She is a great bad woman, whom we hate, but whom we fear more than we hate." This fear came from her utter steadiness.

Textual basis for this choice could come from any of the following pieces of text:

Hie thee hither, That I may pour my spirits in thine ear And chastise with the valour of my tongue All that impedes thee from the golden round, Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem To have thee crowned withal.
