

Developmental Theories Report

Introduction:

"Human development can be defined as a process of progressive changes in people's lives over time that enables them to adjust more effectively to their environments." (Drewery & Claiborne, 2014). There are many theories of how children develop, for example, Charles Darwin who proposed that species develop over time, or Piaget who believes "errors are windows to the mind." (Peters, 2018) Each theorist to their own, they link their ideology to make sense of events. (Drewery & Claiborne, 2014). In this report I will be focusing on Mason Durie and Urie Bronfenbrenner, who both create a construction of factors they believe impact the child's development. Durie, takes a holistic approach and focuses on Hauora the wellbeing of the child, whereas Bronfenbrenner's Ecological System Theory shows how the child interacts with five social systems. The ABC's of human development are shown throughout both of these two theories. Affective, Biological, and Cognitive development are demonstrated through a child's emotions, social life, culture, spirituality, morals, genetics, biological make-up, knowledge, thinking, and understanding. (Paki, 2018).

Links to Maori theory:

Mason Durie has a holistic approach to a child's development, meaning that he focuses on the more spiritual aspects of impact. The Wairua and Hauora/Wellbeing of a child has a great influence on their development, which is portrayed through the four walls of the Whare Tapa Wha. The taha tinana being the physical wellbeing; taha hinengaro, the mental and emotional wellbeing; taha whanau being family and social wellbeing; taha wairua, the spiritual wellbeing; and whenua, being the land/roots that holds everything together. They stimulate each other through social agreement as "each aspect reflects the person's need to grow competent, nurtured, and sustained in mind, body and soul." (Drewery & Claiborne, 2014). Community involvement, for example, is an essential part of the Whare Tapa Wha as it is one of the four walls that hold the Whare together. Students need support from home as well as school staff/teachers, for their wellbeing in development. The Montessori method of children's development suggests that for a child to learn effectively, the need of a learning triangle of collaboration between student, parent, and teacher is vital.

Career Development as a Partner in Nation Building Australia Wendy Patton,2019-07-15 Despite examples of vocational guidance practice being evident in Australia since the mid 1800s there remains a spasmodic and patchwork approach to practice across the country For decades it is a field which has been paradoxically boosted and challenged by changing economic and political agendas Repeated international national and State reviews emphasise the vital nature of a systemic national approach to career development however authors repeatedly lament the lack of a sustained focus on career activity as a major national priority There is no broad comprehensive historical reckoning of the history of career development theory and practice in Australia since this early period Career development theory and practice in Australia has been forged in partnership with developments in an international context In documenting the shared history with other countries the author significantly adds to the body of knowledge on career development as a field in Australia and internationally The book provides new understandings about the historical development of this field of knowledge and in particular the challenging and cyclical nature of its policy history

Change and Continuity at the World Bank Peter J. Hammer, 2013-01-01 This fascinating book examines the World Bank's capacity for change illustrating the influence of overlapping political, organizational, and epistemic constraints. Through comprehensive historical and economic analysis, Peter J. Hammer illuminates the difficulties faced by recent attempts at reform and demonstrates the ways in which the training and socialization of Bank economists work to define the policy space available for meaningful change. The author examines the patterns of change and continuity at the World Bank during the presidencies of James Wolfensohn (1995-2005), Paul Wolfowitz (2005-2007), and Robert Zoellick (2007-2012) and discusses the role that various Chief Economists have played in the evolution of the Bank's research activities. His analysis of Bank reforms, both successful and unsuccessful, demonstrates how neoclassical economics sets the Bank's research and development agendas and limits reform possibilities derived from different academic traditions. This clear and balanced account is an important case study in the role that epistemic constraints can play in the formation of public policy with implications for both the World Bank and other international organizations. Students, professors, and researchers with an interest in economic development, institutional economics, and policy studies will find it an invaluable resource, as will government officials and practitioners working in international development.

Measurement Problems in Criminal Justice Research National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Committee on Law and Justice, 2002-12-18 Most major crime in this country emanates from two major data sources. The FBI's Uniform Crime Reports has collected information on crimes known to the police and arrests from local and state jurisdictions throughout the country. The National Crime Victimization Survey, a general population survey designed to cover the extent, nature, and consequences of criminal victimization, has been conducted annually since the early 1970s. This workshop was designed to consider similarities and differences in the methodological problems encountered by the survey and criminal justice research communities and what might be the best focus for the research community. In addition to comparing and contrasting the methodological issues associated with self-report surveys and official records, the workshop explored methods for obtaining accurate self-reports on sensitive questions about crime events, estimating crime and victimization in rural counties and townships, and developing unbiased prevalence and incidence rates for rare events among population subgroups.
