

Final Research Paper

This assignment, the last of the major assignments, brings together what you have learned about constructing arguments and finding and evaluating secondary sources.

Assignment Description

For this assignment, you should write on the same topic as your Article Comparison Essay. If you completed the Article Comparison Essay, you've already found and analyzed two sources you can use in your essay.

Below are some guidelines to help you draft your essay.

Introduction

A successful introduction will do two things:

1. Establish why your research question or topic is important, and
2. Present a specific, argumentative thesis that is grounded in evidence.

When students are learning how to write essays, they are often told to begin their essays with general statements that contextualize the topic they are discussing. This advice often leads students to make overly general statements like:

- In today's society, children are using a lot of technology, or
- Since the beginning of time, education has been important.

These types of statements are actually too general to be helpful to the reader. Instead, identify a specific context or issue that highlights the importance of your topic. For example:

- The impact of technology on brain development has become a hotly debated topic among parents and educators over the last decade.
- The number of colleges offering online courses has doubled in the last five years, making it vital that educators develop better ways to facilitate collaborative learning in their online classes.

Each of these sentences introduces the topic of the paper and indicates why that topic is important. In the first example, the writer connects the topics of technology and brain development to recent debates among parents and educators. In the second example, the writer connects the topic of online education to recent increases in the online course offerings at universities.

After you've established why your research question or topic is important, you can present your argument. Your thesis should present an argumentative claim that can be supported by evidence. This means it should make a claim that a reasonable person could disagree with.

Non-argumentative thesis:

Many teenagers who play soccer develop concussions.

Argumentative thesis:

While many schools have changed policies to reduce the effects of concussions on football players, they should also change
