combination with assisted reproductive technologies ARTs has opened new opportunities for animal breeding and selection. However, the individual ability for acquiring better fertility and productivity scores are genetically controlled and vary substantially among individuals and species. Therefore, there is a need for further investigation into the identification of genomic, transcriptomic, proteomic, and metabolomic biomarkers involved in fertility pathways that increase productivity scores. This research topic aims to elucidate new insights into the application of Omic technologies to identify new biomarkers in animal production and reproduction science. The goal is to generate important advances in the study of gamete interactions and their effects on offspring while also elucidating the impact of new biomarkers on animal breeding and selection methods. The research will not only provide important benefits compared to conventional technologies but also contribute to increasing animal health, welfare, reducing production costs, and increasing fertility. To gather further insights into the application of Omic technologies in animal production and reproduction science, we welcome articles addressing but not limited to the following themes: research surrounding Omic biomarkers and important fertility traits; application of Omics to genetic resources for increasing reproductive, productive, performance traits; studies on reproduction, nutrition, production traits using Omic biomarkers; research on genomic and genetic biomarkers implicated in reproductive and production traits; studies on Omic biomarkers, reproduction, health, control, interaction, and efficient production traits; research on Omic biomarkers and biodiversity protection programs, germplasm banking, and ex situ preservation; studies on Omics and reproduction, welfare, practices, and efficient production traits; Omic biomarkers and interactions among production, reproduction, environment, climate.
