

Tec Objectives

By the end of this section, you should be able to:

1. Demonstrate and recognize the hand signals for:
 - line
 - entanglement
 - reel
 - I think I'm bent.
 - question
 - Turn the dive.
2. Identify where your team mates rank in your chain of back up systems.

You should also highlight or underline the answers to these questions as you find them:

3. What is the one back up your team mates provide that you cannot provide yourself?
4. What are the duties of a safety/support diver?

Team Diving III More Hand Signals

Here are some more signals unique to tec diving. You've probably already learned some or all of these from your instructor during your training dives, but let's go over them anyway so the underwater photographer doesn't feel like he took all these pictures for nothing.

~~Use the line signal for anything pertaining to a line.~~ You might use this to ask where a line is, or to signal a team mate that you've spotted a line.

The entanglement signal is the same signal as line, but waved in an eight-shape. Try to avoid needing this one too much.

The reel signal is for anything about a reel or reels, and the I think I'm bent signal obviously means you suspect you have DCS. Knowing how to signal that you may be bent is important because it allows your support divers and/or team mates to prepare to handle the emergency at the surface even before you get there.

To be clear that you're asking something, start with the question signal. You might signal, question - reel, to ask "Do you have the reel?"

Since thumbs up is a command signal that means end the dive immediately, tec divers have a second signal, turn the dive. The turn the dive signal means, "Okay, it's time to go, but no emergency or

Line.

Entangled.

Reel.
