Impact of Implementing Intelligence Community Information Technology Enterprise (IC ITE) within the Intelligence Community

Chapter I: INTRODUCTION:

The purpose of this paper is to explore how the Director of National Intelligence (DNI) can improve intelligence information sharing and integration. The Intelligence Community Information Technology Enterprise (IC ITE) is one way the DNI could improve intelligence information sharing and integration. Through the development and deployment of IC ITE services, the DNI has potential to provide to the Intelligence Community (IC) an automated, collaborative, secure, and dynamic environment with the necessary tools for IC integration and collaboration not previously experienced. The IC ITE operates under a blueprint of the National Intelligence Strategy (NIS) shaping priorities for IC agencies[1]. IC ITE services will be used by analysts, mission support users, and consumers of intelligence products. The majority of users have little or no knowledge of how IC ITE will impact mission, daily operations, funding, human resources, contracts, and acquisition practices. Some traditional methods currently used within the IC to assist analysis will change such as data access, programs, applications, and use of technology in the completion of daily activities.

This change will require new policies, agreements, and improvements in how users' access disseminates, and store data. In addition to those above, a culture shift and change in mindset are essential for full integration and collaboration. The full implementation of IC ITE will improve analysis for IC members, and consumers of information

The result is seamless sharing and integration process is more of a procedure of improving collaboration between various intelligence departments[3]

The former Director shared his vision by moving most security organizations to to an entirely digital enterprise.
