Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a training group (TRN). The TRN group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The CON group remained sedentary. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The TRN group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial or non-natural light sources. Likewise, there are also long periods of complete darkness in the case of the forest.
- Several measures therefore will come with the use of the standard time specifications, the length of the day and night being determined by the local country regulations.
- The end of the night is determined by the way that the period of darkness is defined. In practice, this is the time when the sun is just below the horizon and the sun is not visible for three minutes of twilight.
- However, there is considerable variation in the way that the end of the night is determined.
