

A photograph of a man in a blue shirt and dark pants walking away from the camera on a paved path that curves through a lush green golf course. The path is bordered by tall, dense trees on the right, and a vibrant rainbow is visible in the sky, its colors reflecting on the path and the surrounding foliage. The overall scene is peaceful and scenic.

France,2005-03-31 Facilitating Watershed Management brings together myriad distinctive voices to create an experiential learning process drawn from the most important innovators in the field Presenting an introduction to the diversity of tools sociological pedagogical phenomenological needed to implement watershed management in the real world trenches the book helps move students and practitioners from being knowledgeable stewards of watersheds to becoming wise managers of watersheds

Silence, Scapegoats, Self-reflection Volker Roelcke,Sascha Topp,Etienne Lepicard,2015-01-28 Since the end of World War II Nazi medical atrocities have been a topic of ambivalent reactions and debates both in Germany and internationally An early period of silence was followed by attempts of victims and representatives of medical organisations to describe what happened Varying narratives developed some of which had a stabilizing function for the identity of the profession whereas others had a critical and destabilizing function In today's international debates in the field of medical ethics there are frequent references to Nazi medical atrocities in particular in the context of discussions about research on human subjects and on euthanasia The volume analyses the narratives on Nazi medical atrocities their historicity in different stages of post war medicine as well as in the international discourse on biomedical ethics

Reflection-in-Motion Jaclyn Fiscus-Cannaday,2025-05-23 Reflection in Motion considers how reflective practice is embedded in daily course happenings centering the experiences of students and teachers in Minority Serving Institutions to amplify underrepresented viewpoints about how reflection works in the writing classroom Jaclyn Fiscus Cannaday examines how its availability is subject to teacher student power dynamics the literacies welcomed or not in the class the past and present pedagogies that students are engaging with and attending to and the interactions among humans materials and emotions within the rhetorical context She adopts an intersectional feminist perspective for an inclusive view of how practitioners name identify and practice reflection in the everyday moments of writing classrooms Fiscus Cannaday invokes a Black feminist qualitative research method that Venus Evans Winters calls a mosaic When researchers collect both traditional and nontraditional texts to create a full view of students and teachers interviews at three institutions a Hispanic Serving Institution a Historically Black College and University and an Asian American Native American Pacific Islander Serving Institution she finds that practitioners often build definitions from past experiences with reflection and then use those definitions as terministic screens to decide if an activity can be named identified and practiced as reflection These definitions hold different rhetorical effects reflection for introspection reflection for learning reflection for mindfulness and reflection for awareness Reflection is used for these different rhetorical effects but because classrooms so often focus on the Westernized view and its emphasis on growth reflection has the underused and undertheorized potential rhetorical effect of helping students investigate their identities and positionalities acknowledge deep rooted ideologies and consider new perspectives so they can better work across difference Reflection in Motion will inspire teachers and writing program administrators to listen to how students define and practice reflection and why thus making room for more capacious definitions of reflection and student centered practices of what reflection can do and be
