

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CON) and an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic and resistance exercise. The CON group did not exercise. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The EX group also showed a significant increase in the number of steps taken per day and a significant decrease in the number of minutes spent sitting per day. The EX group also showed a significant increase in the number of minutes spent walking per day and a significant decrease in the number of minutes spent standing per day. The EX group also showed a significant increase in the number of minutes spent lying down per day and a significant decrease in the number of minutes spent sitting per day. The EX group also showed a significant increase in the number of minutes spent walking per day and a significant decrease in the number of minutes spent standing per day. The EX group also showed a significant increase in the number of minutes spent lying down per day and a significant decrease in the number of minutes spent sitting per day.
